Dear Quad Alumni,

Greetings from the Quadrangle Club!

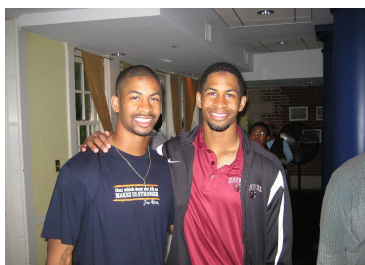

As the Holidays approach, I just want to give my thanks for another wonderful year here in Princeton. As usual, our students are phenomenal to work with – they are enthusiastic and energetic, and always eager to share their happiness with me and other alumni visitors. Since I'm sure you'd like to hear all about it from the horse's mouth, I've attached a letter from the outgoing senior President, Christian Harris.

Alumni events also continue to be well attended. After the Homecoming football game this past Fall, all three floors of the Club were filled with returning Princetonians, happy to be back on campus, and happier still to enjoy all the hospitality the Club has to offer. I'd like to encourage everyone coming back to campus for any reason to consider stopping by the Club to meet our current Undergraduate members and sample the fine food prepared by our Chef and Steward, Neville Sutherland.

As always, I welcome your comments and questions, and look forward to seeing many of you at Alumni Day, Reunions, or whenever your travels bring you close to Princeton. Happy holidays!

Sincerely,

Dear Quad Alumni,

As my term as Undergraduate President draws to a close, I am happy to report that Quad is a more vibrant community than ever. Our membership is a tight-knit and diverse cross-section of the University, with student members from a wide range of teams, organizations, and groups. Our junior members are truly excited to be a part of Quad and they have already made the club their home, doing everything here from working and playing in the backyard to relaxing and partying on weekends. In the coming months we will welcome a new class of members who will bring a whole new energy and diversity to the club. Though the faces may change, the spirit will remain, and Quad will always be a place where one can be free to be themselves and feel at home.

Alumni enjoy the cuisine

Recently Quad worked with the University Student Government to host Matt Nathanson and Lupe Fiasco at Lawn Parties. The concert was a huge success with thousands of students flocking to the club's back yard to enjoy the bands and the beautiful summer weather. Hosting an event this size is truly a monumental task and it is something that Quad has not only made its own, but a staple of the Princeton experience for all Undergraduates.

Quad has continued to be a supporter of the student groups as well. This past year we have hosted dance companies, cultural organizations as well as charitable functions. Our blood drive was a huge success with many students inside and outside the club participating. The club also hosts a language table every week and welcomes professors to come dine with members. In all these ways Quad has continued to be a cornerstone of the Princeton community and a model of what an eating club should be.

I think the best thing about Quad is that there is truly a place for everyone here. It is a welcoming community where you get the opportunity to meet people you might never have met at Princeton. The best times I have had at Princeton have been at Quad, and I have met some of my closest friends here. It is not simply a place to take meals but a place to grow as a person, where you can make a place for yourself, where you can make yourself at home and where everyone knows your name.

In the end that is what Quad is all about, and I am proud to report that things aren't going to change anytime soon. At Quad we welcome our Alumni to come back and reconnect, and I would like to encourage all of you to come back, take a walk around, have a meal, and meet the members. The wonderful thing about Quad is that no matter where our members go after Princeton they can always come back and feel at home. We wouldn't have it any other way.

Sincerely

Christian Harris, Quadrangle Club President
