Dear Quad Alumni,

I hope this letter finds you and your families well. The past few months have been exciting ones around the Quad clubhouse, as we welcomed this year's largest section on "the Street" during sign-ins, then recently played host to a nationally renowned band for Lawnparties. I've included several pictures from the past few months in this letter, but I'll leave further descriptions to our new Undergraduate President, Corey Sanders, whose letter follows this one.

Reunions are obviously just around the corner. For those of you planning to return for the festivities (be it a major reunion for you or not), I'd like to make sure you know that we do our best to ensure that Quad will always have its doors open for you. The clubhouse itself will be open for you and your family to explore throughout the whole weekend. And on Saturday, we will be hosting two separate meals for all alumni:

9am – 1pm: Quad presents a full-featured brunch buffet (for which a nominal contribution is requested) prior to the P-rade. Better than Nassau Street, with none of the wait!

3pm – 6pm: Quad hosts a free barbeque for the whole family out back in our lovely yard. Stop by and see us!

As I mentioned in my last letter, we are now actively soliciting Class Agents for each club section. So far, we've focused on the classes with upcoming major reunions, but soon enough there will be a push to get a representative from each class. This is a great opportunity to get back in touch with clubmates you've drifted away from, and as an added bonus you'll always be "in the loop" on our club events. Let us know if you're interested in being a Class Agent for your class, and a member of our Alumni Relations Committee will be in touch to discuss our goals and the tools we'd be happy to provide you.

Everybody loves karaoke!

The Alumni Relations Committee has also asked me to remind all alumni that the clubhouse is available for events and functions throughout the year, but especially in the summer months. Since my last letter, we've had a handful of recent alumni call about hosting wedding receptions at the club. I'd love to see even more alumni take advantage of our amazing facilities! Prices are very reasonable (especially as compared to typical Princeton prices), and our Chef and Steward Neville Sutherland goes to great lengths to ensure each event surpasses expectations. Feel free to contact us to inquire about your upcoming event!

Something I've heard several times recently while talking to alumni is that they just aren't aware that the club is open to them post-graduation. Others admit they know they can come back, but they don't know what club-sponsored events are hosted for alumni and their families. Well, hopefully these letters are a step in the right direction.

But to get us on the road to the future, I'm proud to announce the launching of our new website, which should be available by the time you receive this letter at <http://www.quadrangleclub.org>. (Thanks must go to a generous alumnus who purchased the domain a few years ago, and donated its use to us all.) This site should stay relatively up-to-date with all the latest alumni events and activities, so feel free to check in as you're planning your next trip back to the area.

One feature of the new website will be a revised and expanded Club Store. From the traditional club ties (they never go out of style!) to snazzy new shirts and sweatshirts designed and produced by undergraduates, everyone is sure to find something they just have to have at the Quad Club Store.

Speaking of technology, did you know that Quad has an email list? Head on over to the University sponsored TigerNet site (<http://tigernet.princeton.edu>), sign up for a user login if you haven't done so before, then click on "Discussion Groups" on the left hand navigation bar. Next click on the "Eating Clubs" link, select the "quad-news" group, and select the delivery mode you'd prefer. It's that easy! We use this list to send out more timely club updates (these letters take a little while to print and distribute), and we encourage all Quad alumni to use it for whatever social reasons they would like.

While I'm at it, I should also point out that the undergraduates also host their own site as part of the University community. Some sections are only available to current members, but it does include a host of general information, and the excitement of being an Undergraduate Quad member practically bleeds from the page. Feel free to check them out at: <http://quad.princeton.edu>.

As I mentioned above, Quad has had some exciting undergraduate events over the past few months. Please see the attached letter from the Undergraduate President to get an even more detailed description of the fun they're having!

I'd like to point out that just a few weeks ago Corey was the only junior selected to win a "Spirit of Princeton" award (<http://www.dailyprincetonian.com/archives/2003/04/28/news/8083.shtml>), given to undergraduate students for their contributions to campus life. I've heard from numerous University administrators over the past several months, all of whom have nothing but ecstatic praise for Corey and his dedication to the clubs and the university. He makes us all proud.

As I mentioned in my previous letter, our ultimate goal here is to reestablish and reenergize the connection between Quad alumni and its undergraduate members (not to mention the club itself). Be it for personal or business events, helping today's students with career decisions, or helping yourself to network with other alumni, we want to make sure everyone continues to get as much out of club membership after graduation as we did when we were still strolling across campus, slinging books, problem sets, theses, and even the occasional pool cue.

I welcome your comments and questions. Enjoy the summer!

Sincerely,

Dear Quad Alumni,

As the year comes to a close, Quadrangle Eating Club has finished with one of the best house parties we have ever had. Our theme was Steven Spielberg, starting on Friday with E.T. and Men In Black. The theme ended with Jurassic Park, Indiana Jones, and Goonies. We had a casino night, a live animal show, and a slide show of the year at Quad. Members enjoyed all aspects of the weekend, especially our new sophomore members, who were invited to all the dinners, unlike most other clubs. Finally, the weekend ended with the popular collegiate band Lifehouse coming to our lawn parties, which ended up being one of the largest concerts Prospect Avenue has ever seen.

In addition to hosting numerous social events including DJs and bands, Quad has also been staying active with the community and University. Working with the University, Quadrangle Club has hosted several alcohol free events that have been extremely well attended, including hosting Jin the rapper, a new member of Ruff Ryders. Additionally, I will be meeting with Mayor Marvin Reed in a week to discuss the first annual Prospect Block Party, a street-wide town gown event with a big name band and carnival games at all the clubs, donating the money to a local charity. Furthermore, Quad members, with help from our Chef, Neville, prepared food to be brought to a local shelter. Quadrangle members also took part in a recent street-wide can drive and blood drive.

Finally, the house is in good order with some newly purchased furniture for our TV room, outdoor furniture for picnics, and the completed new computer cluster. With the purchase of four new computers and a new photo printer, our computer cluster has become the nicest cluster on the street. Because of our newest furniture and facilities, members are constantly around either working in the cluster, reading in the library, or eating outside in the sun. All of our members enjoy just spending time in the house.

We enjoy speaking with and talking to alumni at any time. We heard some great stories at the 100th anniversary celebration and would love to hear more. Stop by Quad whenever you're in the area, grab a meal, and please come talk to us!

Sincerely,

Corey Sanders
